Out going President's Notes

Monthly Meetings are now on the 3rd Saturday of the Month.

We are meeting at 1 PM, the 3rd Saturday of the Month. This change should assist with the safety of our members. No night driving, maybe combine your trip in with an effort to volunteer on the morning of that day, or do some shopping in town.

Folks, Members, Volunteers, Public. I have had the pleasure of leading this group for over a dozen years. Bylaws were amended, Membership has dwindled, Volunteers are still needed. We moved location, gained newly found relatives, lost a few good researchers and gathered more treasures for our collections.

We've welcomed guests, researchers and fellow enthusiasts by hosting "road shows" and "Heritage Days", along with Celebrating 40 years as a Society.

We found our niche at the County Fair, we hope to continue to see you there.

We've supported the Bloomfield Public Library and watched the Old School grow. This side of town is the best around.

History books, dusty & wore, we're still the best repository for it all. As time goes by, we are making resources electronic in digital format for the researchers, near & far.

Check with us, as we have the best of resources, Years of knowledge, put us to the test. We are very capable of breaking brick walls, because what I have found from this TEAM, is that we can do anything we put our minds to.

I thank every one who has supported me, and I pray that all of you continue to support the Davis County Genealogical Society with your memberships, donations, volunteerism, and overall love for Genealogy.

Aureon Charity Grant Program

Aureon invites public and private non-profit agencies to submit proposals for consideration in assisting your charity drives and/or funding of a specific project for your respective communities. Only those communities served by Aureon's participating companies are eligible to submit proposals. Applications may be submitted anytime during the year. The committee will review quarterly the applications received by the end of each quarter. Applicants will be notified of funding decisions. Most awards range in amounts from $250 to $1,500.

Applications can be picked up at Citizens Mutual, 114 W. Jefferson St., Bloomfield, Iowa.

Citizens Mutual would like to congratulate the grant recipients of 2016

Davis County Genealogical Society
Kent Atha, Danna Johnson, Vicki Houk, Joe Snyder

- A great day to receive a grant.
- The NETINS/Aureon Grant was an elongated wait and wait and wait.
- Application was originally started in March of 2016, with the asking grant of $4500 to fund our Digitizing of over 60 newspaper microfilms, along with over 30 more of Births, Deaths & Marriages, Probates, Deeds & Land.
- We were awarded, with a match from CMTEL; $250 towards this project.
- Per our promise, we will now ensure that we communicate to the community, that DCGS has been gifted funds by Aureon/CMTEL, along with others (see additional pages of this newsletter for stories) and will fulfill the digitizing of Newspaper Microfilms in our library. The process of sending the microfilms off for digitizing, and the safe return of them, includes volunteer hours on our part. Thank you once again to the DCGS members, volunteers & community folks whom backed our project with letters of support & donations.

Many thanks to Bloomfield Communications, Karen Spurgeon, Davis County Treasurer Mike Johnson, Recorder Megan Clyman, Beth Sullivan Library Director. These community folks supported DCGS all through the quest to find the grant funds needed to bring this project to closure. DCGS made the following applications & was awarded

With the funding diminished due to lack of grant awards, we chose as a goal to digitize

Rudy Evans donated $1000, Thank you. Sue Spilman, too name a few.

The Benny Howk memorial was generous, along with the families of Ben donating to have specific years converted, such as Birth year or Graduation Year, etc., Thanks to others, whom have been generous, we are almost to the goal to have completed the project.

First ever Social Media Auction for DCGS, we were given/donated several P Buckley Moss prints by long time member Lana Doll. "North Side of the Square" & "The Road Home" These were placed on our Facebook page <https://www.facebook.com/DavisCountyGenealogicalSociety/> in November/December for Social bidding. This went over well! Thank you Lana, we were able to raise over $500 towards the project.

At County Fair time we usually have a drawing fundraiser, and this year at the Fair intend to show all of the fair goers what this Project looks like completed.

Kent Autha of Aureon (formerly INS) is shown presenting a $250 check to Danna Johnson and Vicki Houk of the Davis County Genealogical Society for digitizing and preserving old newspapers. Joe Snyder of CMTEL, which sponsored the application, looks on.

Genealogical Society receives Aureon grant

The Davis County Genealogical Society was presented $250 in grant funding last week by Aureon (formerly Iowa Network Services).

The charity grant was presented in conjunction with Citizens Mutual Telephone Cooperative, which sponsored the grant application.

The Genealogical Society will use the funds to digitize microfilm of past editions of Bloomfield and Davis County newspapers.

Aureon is now accepting applications for future grants. The grants are available to Iowa communities sponsored by Aureon's participating telecommunication companies. The grants are intended for community betterment projects. The deadline for submission is the end of each calendar quarter.

Interested organizations are encouraged to contact CMTEL to learn more about the program and obtain an application.

Gov. Branstad's $80 million boondoggle

By Randy Evans

Some proposals just leave you shaking your head.

There's an excellent example occurring now in Des Moines. It involves the State Historical Building, that boxy structure west of the Capitol housing the state museum and state library and archives.

Gov. Terry Branstad's administrators think the building is too large. They want to demolish the eastern third, turning that ground into an outdoor "gathering space." They want to shrink the museum space by half, redo the entrance and convert the place into a combination museum, Capitol welcome center and events venue.

All of this comes with a big price tag: $80 million.

There's an important detail Branstad's staff does not mention when pitching the proposal: The museum was completed just 28 years ago, in December 1987, at a cost of $26 million. And who was the governor then? Terry Branstad.

Mary Cownie, the Branstad appointee who heads the Department of Cultural Affairs, the museum's overseer, told reporters the building has been plagued by problems for many years. She called it "an absolute embarrassment."

Yes, the skylights leak. That allows rain to drip onto the fabric of historic airplanes that hang from the ceiling. Sometimes workers have to place large buckets around the atrium lobby to keep water from puddling on the wooden floor.

Yes, pipes are corroding in the basement — where thousands of artifacts are stored. Yes, some of the granite panels on the building's exterior are crumbling.

But those problems exist because Iowa's governors — Branstad and two Democrats, Tom Vilsack and Chet Culver — chose to put off dealing with the building's maintenance issues.

Every Iowan should be troubled by such lousy stewardship of this important state asset. The building is only 28 years old, for crying out loud.

Branstad takes pride in his no-nonsense approach to state spending. That's why I have trouble understanding how he can tell people with a straight face that in just 28 years — 17 of them while he's been governor — the building has fallen into such disrepair that $80 million now must be spent to renovate it.

The governor has long advocated finding less expensive solutions and has issued numerous vetoes because he thinks the state can't afford those expenditures. His own Department of Administrative Services told lawmakers recently that the State Historical Building's problems could be fixed for $12.2 million — replacing the roof, installing a new heating and cooling system, repairing exterior walls and improving the drainage.

That's a far cry from $80 million.

There are bigger issues at play here besides leaks. One is the budget for the museum and library. Another is officials allowing the building to drift away from a focus on Iowa history.

If you are researching your family's genealogy and want to examine census records or old newspapers from around Iowa, the state history libraries in Des Moines and Iowa City are the places to go. But you can go there only three days per week because of staff cuts.

When you get there, you will find the state stopped microfilming local newspapers in 2009 because of budget cuts. Bundles of papers, with their invaluable accounts of Iowa history, are piling up waiting for a possible resumption of microfilming. But Cownie has refused to ask lawmakers for money to resume that work or to digitize those papers.

Spending $80 million won't address another big problem with the State Historical Building — and that's the focus inside the building.

When you walk into the cavernous atrium lobby, huge amounts of empty space greet you. The museum staff could bring artifacts out of storage and display them in the atrium. But those would get in the way of the lobby being rented for corporate dinners and wedding receptions.

Sen. Matt McCoy, a Des Moines Democrat, said recently, "Nowhere in the mission does it say we should be renting out space for weddings. We've made a mistake by trying to keep [the lobby] open and empty so we can set up tables and have a dance there or a wedding."

There are numerous places in and around Des Moines where couples can have wedding receptions or corporations and organizations can have big dinners. State government has no business competing with other venues for those events.

The priority for the State Historical Building needs to be Iowa history — helping educate people young and old about our past and the issues, challenges and trends that have shaped this state.

Cownie calls the current museum "stagnant." But if it is, it's because she and the governor have allowed that to occur for the past five years. She and Branstad have failed to press lawmakers for money to keep the exhibits fresh, to keep the skylights from leaking and to keep the library open more days than it is closed.

Cownie said critics of the $80 million renovation favor "a short-term Band-Aid solution." No. The Band-Aid was what she and her predecessors used when setting out buckets when it rained. A Band-Aid won't solve what ails the State Historical Building. But amputation won't solve that either.

Esther Williams In "Million Dollar Mermaid"

A fascinating picture inspired by the life story of Annette Kellerman, the world's most famous bathing beauty, is unfolded on the Iowa screen in "Million Dollar Mermaid," starring Esther Williams, Victor Mature, Walter Pidgeon and David Brian. It is a story replete with humor, action, excitement, heart appeal and some of the most resplendent water spectacles ever conceived for a Technicolor motion picture.

Annette Kellerman gained world fame for her marathon swims and for her arresting diving acts and swimming diversions in the tremendous tank at New York's old Hippodrome. Earlier, she had achieved equal renown when she was arrested for indecent exposure at Boston's Revere Beach because she had

Wildlife Plantings Still Available

Iowa landowners are showing greater interest each year in wildlife and erosion control, as indicated by seedling orders from the state nursery at Ames. The State Conservation Commission reports that such plant orders have been showing a definite increase for several years. The plant seedlings most in demand during the past few months have been multiflora rose, dogwood, Russian olive, black locust, green ash, and pine. The supply of stratified walnuts has been exhausted, and only small quantities of other donned a man's one-piece racing suit. It was this occurrence which to a large extent emancipated women from the burden beginning of today's one-piece bathing suit.

With Miss Kellerman herself on of the voluminous, skirted and corseted bathing costumes of the early 1900's and presaged the hand as technical adviser for her life story, "Million Dollar Mermaid" reveals her victory as a child in overcoming a physical handicap by swimming exercise and traces her career from her early triumphs in Sydney, Australia, where she became amateur free-style champion, to her first fame aboard when she succeeded in a hazardous twenty-six mile swim down the Thames River, an achievement which was to make her a star at the Hippodrome. It is here that the story permits the inclusion of such famed Kellerman spectacle number as the "Water Curtain" spectacle, the "Smoke" number and the "Quartz" number, all of which are brought to the screen in a spellbinding glitter and Technicolor magnificence.
