

tarian in its management, admits people of all classes, and is not only the pride of the church which supports it but of the city and county in which it is located.

Next to the largest packing house in the world is located in the city of Cedar Rapids and enters into successful competition with the eastern packers for one of the principal products of the Iowa farm.

Linn county has many other institutions worthy of mention, but in a history as limited as is this it is not possible to give them the notice they deserve. There are many individuals within the county who have been so related to the state and nation that in a more extended history should and would receive personal mention. The present standing and development of the county is well known to all those to whom this brief outline of Linn county's history and progress will come. Regretting the limitations of this sketch, and with a faith in and best wishes for the future development of the county, this brief history is brought to a close.
